Awards Ceremony Highlights the Annual Banquet

US Congressmen, Jim McDermott and Jay Inslee, were joined by Senator Sid Snyder, Senator Gene Lux, King County Council Chair Larry Phillips, and WSDCC Chair Dwight Pelz, in celebrating the life and times of Governor Mike Lowry, Friday February 17, 2006. Several others added comments including Representatives Maralyn Chase, Phyllis Kenney, and former KCDCC Chair Ron Forest. The Spirit of Washington company owner Eric Temple sponsored the event at their event center and provided a wonderful steak dinner with all the trimmings. The banquet is held each year to celebrate the wonderful volunteers of the Democratic Party in King County and this year was no exception. Democrats nominated their candidates in each category and then voted using an online application at the KCDCC Website. We are very proud of the large number of Democratic volunteers in King County and the work they accomplish at the precinct, Legislative District, and County level.

And, the winners were: (next column)

PCOs Democratize

— Noemie Maxwell, 2nd Vice Chair, PCO— 47th LD Democrats

Hello. My mission here is to talk about Precinct Committee Officers, or PCOs. I'm not the expert on this. There are people who know more. For example, Evelyn Raymond is in my district. She's just won volunteer of the year award from King County Democrats – mostly for her work as a PCO. I'm a beginner who came into this in early 2004 and I've learned a lot from Evelyn. But I do have my perspective and it might be a little bit different, so I'll share it.

First, I need to describe what PCOs do.

They are the political representatives of the Democratic Party on the neighborhood level. This is position described in the Revised Code of Washington – and they're elected every two years during the general election and can also be appointed.

A precinct is a small area with something like 300-600 people. As far as I know, most of the United States is divided into precincts for political reasons. Here in King County, there are 2,613 of them. So that gives an idea of the size of these little neighborhoods.

PCOs keep informed on candidates and issues by going to meeting and events. Then they take that information out into the neighborhoods. They go door-to-door before elections. They talk with their neighbors and they find who are the declared Democrats, who are the declared Republicans, who are the swing voters. Then they work to get the Democrats and swing voters registered and voting. And they bring them the persuasive information on candidates and issues.

So PCOs bring information from the Party to their neighbors. But the information goes two ways. They also listen to their neighbors so that they learn about what people are thinking, what is affecting them in their lives. And they take this information back to the district organizations and to candidates. It's how the Party stays connected with real people and real issues – and vice versa.

There are other things PCOs do, as well. They elect the party leadership and help to set the party platform. Sometimes they nominate – or even elect – candidates for public office.

It's a powerful model. PCOs are key to getting Democratic candidates elected and important issues passed or defeated. In swing districts – for example, where I live in South King County – the elections can hinge on just a few votes. The work that PCOs do can be the deciding factor. Over the long term, their work goes beyond the results of individual elections and gets to what politics is all about – serving people and communities – being connected with the real needs and real concerns of people on the neighborhood level.

This is a power that can be used for ill, as well as for good. The book, What's the Matter with Kansas, describes how Kansas was a moderate Republican state in the early 1990s. Then religious extremists decided to get in the PCO business – and thousands of PCOs were trained and went door to door to depict all pro-choice candidates – Democratic and Republican – as morally bankrupt. It worked. In one election cycle, Kansas went from moderate, good-government Republican leadership – to a state run by religious extremists.

When I first heard about PCOs, in early 2004, I was in despair over the lies and catastrophic misbehavior of the Bush administration and it was like a light going on. I thought, this is powerful. I thought, this is like the search for extraterrestrial intelligence. What I'm referring to here is a distributed computing program out of the University of California in Berkley called SETI. SETI is an experimental program that uses many small computers as if they're one big one to look for life out in the stars. If your desktop computer is hooked up to the Internet, you can go to UC Berkley's site and download something that's like a screen-saver. It hooks you up with thousand of other computers around the world. Only a little bit of the power of each computer is used – but together it's more powerful than any supercomputer – and so it can do the kind of astronomical calculations that are needed to find intelligent life. The thing about being a PCO – is that we're not looking for extraterrestrial intelligence. What we're doing is joining together to awaken earthly intelligence – to find and inspire domestic intelligence – one conversation at a time, door-to-door, meeting-by-meeting.

Here are my Top-Ten reasons that – PCOs are a force for Democratization:

10.

BUILD POLITICAL COMMUNITY AND RESPECT

PCOs make politics personal. In this time of talk radio extremism, the presence of a concerned citizen at the door commands respect across political and cultural divides.

INSPIRE ACTION AND HOPE

PCOs encourage people to act – to register to vote, to cast their ballots, to participate in Democratic events, to speak up. Political action counters apathy and fear and gives people hope.

8.

COUNTER THE SPIN –

ONE CONVERSATION AT A TIME

PCOs give their neighbors political information that is relevant to their communities and that cuts through political rhetoric.

7.

MAKE PERSONAL CONNECTIONS AND INCREASE KNOWLEDGE

PCOs and their neighbors get to know candidates, elected officials, each other, and their communities. They understand local and state issues and what their neighbors are thinking about. It's excellent preparation for potential candidates – or for any public service role.

BREATHE LIFE BACK INTO THE ART

OF RESPECTFUL POLITICAL DIALOGUE

Civic dialogue on issues that matter to people and communities is essential for democracy to thrive.

5.

KEEP PARTISAN FEET ON THE GROUND

PCOs keep the Democratic Party connected to the grassroots and to the issues important in local communities by bringing community issues and concerns back to the Democratic organizations.

PROMOTE POLITICAL RESILIENCE AND EMPATHY

Doorbelling and political meetings bring together people from all different backgrounds and beliefs. There's no better way to toughen up thin political skins – or get insight into the on-the-ground realities of your neighbors than by meeting them face-to-face.

3.

MAKE PEOPLE THINK

PCOs help sow a little healthy ideological doubt in the neighborhoods – and open up new ways to think about issues.

2.

PROMOTE JUSTICE, UNITY AND CULTURAL DIVERSITY

People from different political, religious, and cultural backgrounds need more opportunities get to know each other, to understand each other's issues, and to be allies. This is the foundation of healthy communities and thriving democracy.

GET DEMOCRATS ELECTED

Door-to-door personal contact has been shown to be the most effective way to inspire people to vote.

SAVE THE DATE: MAY 20, 2006—10:30 am

Join the King County Democrats for lunch on the Spirit of Washington — have lunch and spend time with candidates and elected officials. Rally will begin at 10:30 am in Renton and train will depart for Woodinville at 11:15 am.

Stay tuned for details.

"The only people who want us in Iraq is Iran and al-Qaeda. I talked to a top-level commander and he said China wants us there also. Why? Because we're depleting our resources - our troop resources and our fiscal resources...The war on terrorism is worldwide. In Iraq, it's a civil war. We have diverted ourselves away from that war on terrorism."

Chair's Corner

Thank you to everyone who planned, prepared, and conducted the 2006 precinct caucuses — you did a great job. The Party has new members and PCOs, and we hope that the discussions and platform work continue throughout the cycle and beyond. This Fall with the grassroots effort, we can make change by taking back America with victories in the US Senate and the Congress.

The next time some one asks you why the Democrats aren't doing anything about the nation's problems, you may want to let them know that we do not have the majority in the US Senate or the US House or the Supreme Court or the White House. It is very difficult to affect change when you are not in the majority. The following excerpt is a great example of what has been going on in Washington, D.C., since January 20, 2001, and may continue unless — WE TAKE BACK OUR COUNTRY in the 2006 ELECTIONS.

Senate Republicans Choose Bush Over Country on Domestic Spying
by Bob Geiger at Democrats.com, 3/7/2006

"The GOP-controlled Senate Intelligence Committee on Tuesday voted against a formal Congressional investigation of George W. Bush's domestic spying program, despite almost-certain knowledge that the White House has violated key provisions of Foreign Intelligence Security Act (FISA) laws over the last four years.

The vote, held in a closed session was strictly on party lines with all seven Democrats voting for an investigation and the committee's eight Republicans voting to let Bush off the hook."
